

10 Successful Women Share Their Goals for the Year

By Krista Gray | January 22, 2019

Feature Image by rawpixel

Setting a goal is a smart idea for a few reasons – it gives you something to work for, reminds you to tackle each day with intent, and gives you a mark to measure success.

preneurs? Ahead, 10 lady bosses ndy).

s, leaning on leaders, and pany – and just for fun, starting a book library in our office!” – Elana, founder of Bird and Stone

“In 2019, I’d like to understand more about what self-care means for me. I’ve discovered my “happy spends” are those that involve some type of experience. I arrange flowers every week and I’ve invested in “maker” hobbies like paper flower making and illustration.” – Kelly Nyland, founder and CEO of Petalfox

“I want to abandon my fear of public speaking and speak on larger panels this year, find a charity true to my heart that I can regularly contribute to both financially and with my time, and open my first store! — Kathryn McCarron, founder of Kathryn McCarron

“My goal for 2019 is to impact thousands of peoples’ lives with coaching sessions. I want to successfully educate, guide, and support them by phone, video, or text.” – Emily Hochman, founder and CEO of Wellory

“I want my energy in 2019 to go full force toward making sure women of color (like myself) are more visible and represented in the market.” – Anit Hora, founder and CEO of M.S Skincare

“In 2019, I want to be more open to ideas and empower others to succeed. I want to be better at trusting others to do their jobs and giving them the support they need to get things done.” – Vivian Chen, co-founder and CEO of Rise

“I want a quality of life and longevity, the key to which is personal health. In 2019, I am raising the bar in all areas of health.” – Juliet Kaska, celebrity trainer at Move for You

- to be better as a whole and as a ideas are to try a new recipe, the moment and thankful for it.”
ciety

“I want to focus on strategies that improve our ability to attract more potential clients and tactics to convert more opportunities to leads.” – Amity Kapadia, founder of Brightly

“My goal is to continue to share diverse and compelling stories from guests, whether they themselves have invisible illnesses, they have a family member with an invisible illness, or they’re connected to invisible illnesses in some way.” – Harper Spero, founder of Made Visible Podcast

xx, The FabFitFun Team

SHARE THIS ARTICLE

ABOUT AUTHOR

Krista Gray

Krista Gray is a web producer and freelance writer who lives in San Francisco. When she's not working with clients through her company GoldSquare, she loves reading, traveling, and learning new things.

IKE

LIFE

How to Get a Head Start on Your New Year's Resolutions Before January 1

by Leslie Tulip / December 26, 2018

LIFE

8 Tips Every First-Time Bridesmaid Should Know

by Anna Mason / July 23, 2019

WELLNESS

Here's Why You Should Care About Pokémon Go

16

free!

10 Successful Women Share Their Goals for the Year - FabFitFun

The Top Hair Trends Worth Trying This Year

LEAVE A REPLY

Your email address will not be published. Required fields are marked *

Name *

Email *

POST COMMENT

RIES

Sale Contact Us

Find Us on Social Media

Designed and built with ❤️ in California